1. INTRODUCTION

The Cultural Association of Archaeology and Sciences of Antiquity (ARCIAN) is pleased to announce the celebration of its second International Meeting of Young Researchers in Archaeology and Antiquity Sciences (EINIACA), to be held at Geography and History college of the University of Santiago de Compostela (Galicia, Spain), on 20, 21 and 22nd July 2016.

ARCIAN was founded on September 17th, 2014 in order to promote knowledge and research in the fields of Archaeology and Sciences of Antiquity, organize cultural and educational activities, and stimulate interaction between specialists and Young researchers in both fields of study. The convening of this meeting is the continuation event of EINIACA15, which aims to promote the exchange, knowledge and dialogue between junior researchers of Archaeology and Sciences of Antiquity. This Association has the support from several academic institutions in its founding and organizing the conference.

In this activity, we propose a second International Meeting of Young Researchers. It will be divided into several sessions spanning from Prehistory to Late Antiquity. Each day, it will proceed to the presentation of thematic tables, communications and posters, in which can be used audiovisual material, such as PowerPoint, transparencies or slides.

ARCIAN and the Organizing Committee of the II International Meeting of Young Researchers in Archaeology and Antiquity Sciences (EINIACA) invite to participate in the conference to all researchers who meet the following requirements:

- Students enrolled into Master studies related to the theme of the congress.
- Predoctoral students stage.
- Doctors who have not read his thesis prior to 2013.
- It also will accommodate the proposals of those researchers who have completed a Bachelor or Master Degree but are not enrolled in a doctoral program or do not belong to an academic institution.

Due to the limited available spots, all proposals will be subject to a rigorous selection process conducted by our Committee, which is composed of experienced and highly respected researchers into the academic community.
