

The Workshop to be held in Malaga on 15 and 16 October will bring together a group of experts on Information and Incentives. This Workshop is structured in two parts. The first part is addressed to the scientific community, the language to be used is English and will take place from 9:00 to 14:00 in the Rectorado UMA Building. In this part, researchers of international prestige, headed by Jean Tirole, Nobel Prize in Economics, and Salvador Barberà, Juan Carlos I Prize for economy, will present the latest advances on the subject. The second part is addressed to the general public, will take place on the 15th, from 16:30 to 18:00, in the Mena Italcable Building UNIA, and in it, Professor Tirole will give a talk on the same subject.

The starting point of this Workshop is that the need to define "social welfare" requires making judgments of value, possibly reflecting our preferences, the information we have and our position in society.

On the one hand, we know that the decisions we make are restricted by the limited information we have. On the other hand, people react to incentives, facing them and sometimes we use the fact that we are better informed to take advantage of others.

Institutions must take into account the existence of asymmetric information when they design their policies and this Workshop will give us the keys on how to do this.
