Academic Expertise and Public Engagement:

My areas of expertise and public engagement have been on the international human rights regime and processes of ASEAN regional integration. The theoretical thrust of my work comes from constructivism in IR and the power of institutions in the English School tradition. In 2012, I was a member of the Philippine Delegation in the drafting of the ASEAN Human Rights Delegation and I continue to work on several projects with the Philippine Department of Foreign Affairs. This experience interweaves with interest on the communicative dynamics of diplomatic negotiations through the analytical lens of sociology and linguistics. Recent interests have brought me to studying humanitarianism in the development of regional mechanisms (East Asia/ASEAN) on disaster management and search and rescue.

In the context of K+12 National Curricular Reform, I participate in key committees at the University of the Philippines both in terms of policy formulation and substantive course content design, monitoring and evaluation. I am a USAID -Stride Independent Expert for the Philippine Commission on Higher Education (CHED).

UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

Research Fellow,
World University Network, Research
Mobility Programme
Sydney, Australia (August 2012 to November 2012)

UNIVERSITY OF DEUSTO and UNIVERSITY OF PALERMO

Lecturer, Faculty of Social and Human Sciences and Pedro Arrupe Institute for Human Rights, University of Palermo
(2008-2009)

Course Title: International Politics and International Organization
The course aims to explore various issues which question the dominance of Westphalian elements, principles and structures in international politics: the state system, the principle of sovereignty and non-intervention, and "settled norms". It attempts to provide the framework within which global issues in recent history may be scrutinized, debated and be marshalled as a basis for questioning international policy-making.

European Masters in Public Policy and Local Development

- Students and graduates belong to the field of politics, communication studies, law and development.
- Students come from as well as continue on with employment in non-governmental organisations (NGOs), the civil service, local government units, as well as private practice, going on with previous professions.
- The majority of students are from Spain, Italy and Latin America.
