16. Oh sweet grief
Madrigals to four voices

London 1599

John Bennet (c.1575-c.1614)

Transcribed and edited by Nancho Alvarez http://tomasluisdevictoria.org Oh sweet grief Bennet sharp-ly sweet and sweet-ly sharp con-sent-ing and sweet-ly sharp complain-ing griev-e those deep groans strain-sweet com-plain-ing griev-e those deep groans straining, your bitter anguish now shall have relenting, straining, your bitter anguish now shall have relenting, your bitter anguish now shall have relenting, now shall shall have relenting, relenting, and sharp disdains, and sharp disdains shall have relenting, relenting and sharp disdains re guish now shall have relenting and have relenting, and have relenting, relenting shall have relentdains receive their full contenting, contenting.

receive their full contenting, receive their full contenting.

sharp disdains, and sharp disdains, receive their full contenting.

sharp disdains, and sharp disdains receive their full contenting.